Myrtle Beach Bike Week: 2021 FALL RALLY

Myrtle Beach Bike Week is one of the most famous rallies in the country. As such, it attracts some of the nation's greatest. And they'll all have their motorcycles on display at the bike show. This year marks the 82nd anniversary, and after a low turnout in 2020, the fall rally will be on in full force from September 27th through October 3rd.

This event draws many of the same Harley-Davidson riders that come in the spring who just couldn't get enough of Myrtle Beach. Whether you want to show off your hog or window shop for a new one, this bike show is a must-see. Vendors will be available and biker bars are still the happening place to be for Fall Bike Week.

Many Fall Rally-goers hit the road for a tour down the coastline. With much less congestion compared to the spring, you can stay awhile in one of the small beach towns dotting the shoreline. Make sure to stop along the way to visit the local biker hot spots like Ocean Annie's Beach Bar, the Rat Hole, and the infamous Suck Bang Blow.

The best part about Fall Rally at Myrtle Beach is that it's much calmer than the Spring Rally. Fewer motorcyclists come out for this event, making it perfect for spending a little more leisure time on the Grand Strand.

Bikes & Beards:

Crazy Custom Bike Builds

This one definitely belongs in the "How did they do it? … WHY did they do it?!" department!

If you can dream it, you can build it—and who is better at dreaming things up than little kids? That's what inspired the YouTubers at "Bikes and Beards" to tackle these impossible bike builds:

- A bike built entirely out of parts procured from Harbor Freight
- Another bike using only items from a local Home Depot store
- A chariot, custom-fitted to an original Orange County chopper
- The fastest and biggest Jet Ski motorcycle ever put on the road

And don't forget the world's fastest motorcycle lawnmower… it gives "cut and run" a whole new meaning!

Who are these wild-and-crazy guys? Sean and Craig are the two masterminds behind these engineering marvels.

It's highly entertaining to watch their YouTube videos. While Sean takes up most of the on-camera duties, Craig is quietly beavering away in the background, coming up with CAD solutions, welding, and just generally making bonkers ideas like these come to life.

How hard can it be, right? You will be impressed to see how they made a motorcycle waterproof and attached twin electric lawnmowers to a dirt bike. Also, take a look at how the chariot controls work – it is absolutely insane! So check it out! You will find all of these videos on their YouTube channel: www.getmore-info.com/beards

Which parts can you get at Home Depot? Among the pile of parts purchased, you'll see: a rolling stool that turns into a handy saddle, two big wheels, a 420cc Predator engine, an engine hoist, and a big pair of tree loppers to use as handlebars. As it turns out, reconfiguring the engine hoist is what provides the basic structure of the entire build. Incidentally, key design features include a single-sided swingarm and a single-sided fork. No, really.

What could possibly go wrong? You will have to press the Play button to find out… but trust me, these are interesting and funny videos to watch. And they look like they were even more fun to produce. All of these custom builds are head-turners and it is a kick to see people's reactions. Especially the cop that pulled Sean over while he was riding a Jet Ski motorcycle on the highway…

So how did these guys fare with getting their custom-built motorcycles to pass inspection and make them street legal? You probably know the answer, but it's still fun to watch!

These parts are all CNC machined from billet aluminum and then given a color anodized finish. They have a number of different styles of air cleaners that come in the colorways, including the Method and Clear Tear which do a masterful job of making a functional part of the bike a style statement.
